GROWING ANXIETY OVER UNSAFE & UNTRUSTWORTHY CHILDCARE

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 08, 2025

By mid-2024, when a sub-sample of the same mothers was resurveyed, another layer emerged: one in four (24%) working mothers reported that their spouse or other family members had tried to prevent them from working.

Women explained that husbands rarely forbade them outright, but imposed conditions—such as waiting until a child grows up, only working if household income fell short, or limiting the types of jobs considered acceptable. Many women framed their reasons for working in terms of family needs, reflecting how voice (desire to work) often exists without influence (the

INDUSTRY ANALYSIS THROUGH PORTER’S FIVE FORCES

Threat of New Entrants	LOW-MODERATE	Strong regulatory compliance requirements
Buyer Power	MODERATE	Mitigated by the platform's high differentiation and dual-pillar structure
Threat of Subtitutes	MODERATE-HIGH	From the vast, low-cost, and deeply entrenched informal care sector
Supplier Power	HIGH	The reliance on specialized human capital gives this supplier group substantial leverage
Industry Rivalry	LOW-MODERATE	The premium, AI-driven childcare ecosystem is currently under-developed
